Anoushka Harris

Over the past two and a half years I have led and developed Westmill's Sustainability Strategy with senior stakeholders to ensure we are managing our ethical and environmental supply chain risks. I am currently transitioning into a role as Sustainability Manager for UK Grocery Group at ABF to develop a further understanding of our supply chains across our businesses. Due to the nature of Westmill, their supply chain is predominantly located in high-risk countries. As a result, Westmill has two beyond compliance projects in South Asia. I am also in the process of developing a beyond compliance project in Thailand on Sustainable Rice, in addition to the current project in Pakistan with Galaxy Rice .The skills I have learnt in managing and developing these projects would help me to bring further insight to the SRP Board on how it works to manage the projects from a UK centric role.

I have an undergraduate degree in Sustainability and Environmental Management from the University of Leeds, and I have just started the first Sustainability Masters at Cranfield University, which I hope will not only improve my own understanding of the business case for sustainability, but also help me to drive further positive change across our businesses. We now not only have the greatest opportunity, but also the biggest responsibility to help pave the way to protect the planet by transforming our businesses and communities' mindsets towards sustainability. I am passionate about playing a leading part in driving this change, and being part of the SRP Board will provide further insight to help me do this.
